You, a white professor in position of power, should NOT be adding your 2 cents to this conversation. You do NOT get to decide how the n-word is used because YOU using it is racist & no amount of wikipedia articles are enough to bail you out of that.

The word itself does not have some kind of spiritual power. We need to separate a user's intent from recognizing a word that exists. There is no problem with saying "White Niggers of America" or quoting that "the word nigger is an ethnic slur typically directed at black people".

Nigger
From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

For the African country, see Niger. For other uses, see Nigger (disambiguation).

In the English language, the word nigger is an extremely offensive racial slur. The word originated in the 18th century as an abbreviation of the word Negro, which was used derogatorily, and by the mid-20th century it was unambiguously pejorative, a racist insult. According to the Oxford English Dictionary, the word has sparked modern controversy.

Because the term is considered extremely offensive, the variant nigga, by African Americans among other groups, is often used in a different context. The two words are not the same.

Separate but Unequal provides an in-depth critique of the ideology of parallelism—the prevailing view that Indigenous cultures and the wider Canadian society should exist separately from one another in a "nation-to-nation" relationship.

Using the Final Report of the Royal Commission on Aboriginal Peoples as an example, this historical and material analysis shows how the single-minded pursuit of parallelism will not result in a more balanced relationship between Indigenous and non-Indigenous peoples. On the contrary, it merely restores arbitrary economic, political, and ideological forms that will continue to divide the Indigenous population.

How can an institution advance indigenization and reconciliation yet fund the research of profs who want to explore how indian residential schools benefited indigenous people? @TimRahilly

Thanks @mountroyal4u Looks like hate speech disguised as academic freedom is a-okay! What a world we live in where students are treated like garbage, Indian residential schools defended as beneficial and “given credence”! I know where I dont belong!
